

KINESTHETIC ANATOMY & BIOMECHANICS OF MOTION: THE LIMBS 2018
Taught by Irene Dowd

This course has been created to provide participants with functional and kinesthetic comprehension of our musculoskeletal system of the extremities, i.e. the legs and arms. We will study the bones, joint biomechanics and muscles of the limbs. We will also focus on how these joints move and the patterns of muscle coordination that move them in the activities of daily life, such as walking, lifting, carrying and manipulating objects. The schedule of topics is as follows (subject to slight changes):

January 18 – structure and range of motion of hip joint
January 25 – muscles crossing the back and outsides of the hip joint and what they do
February 1 – muscles crossing the front and insides of the hip joint and what they do
February 8 – structure and motion of knee joint
February 15 – muscles and tissues crossing knee joint, their functions in motion
February 22 – strategies for enhancing knee joint function
March 1 – structure, motion, muscles of leg and ankle joint
March 15 – architecture and motion of foot
March 22 – muscles of the foot
March 29 – structure, motion, muscles of shoulder girdle
April 5 – structure and motion of shoulder joint, and rotator cuff function
April 12 – all muscles of shoulder joint, coordination shoulder girdle with shoulder joint
April 19 – elbow joint and joints of the forearm, muscles and actions
April 26 – wrist joint and muscles; bones, structure and motion of hand
May 3 – muscles, movements and activities of hand
